UNITED STATES ARMY CORPS OF ENGINEERS'
STATUS REPORT REGARDING REMAND

Pursuant to the Court's order dated October 18, 2017, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (Corps) respectfully submits this status report regarding the progress of the remand. The Corps continues to work on the three remand issues. Specifically, the Corps is considering: (1) the impacts of a potential oil spill on the Tribe's treaty-protected fishing and hunting rights; (2) potential environmental justice impacts related to a spill at the pipeline's Lake Oahe crossing; and (3) whether the pipeline's effects are likely to be "highly controversial" in light of alleged scientific flaws that had been presented to the Corps. As part of the remand process and as previously reported, the Corps has requested information from the Plaintiffs as well as Energy Transfer Partners. The Corps is currently reviewing various submittals from Energy Transfer Partners including a risk analysis, Integrity Management Plan, environmental justice data, and hunting and fishing impacts analysis. The Corps also has been having ongoing discussions with Energy Transfer Partners (including two meetings on December 21, 2017 and January 24-25, 2018) about the information they have provided.

The Corps is also reviewing multiple letters from the Plaintiff Tribes. The letters generally concern the scope, timing, and format of the Corps' prior information requests instead of responding with the actual information requested by the Corps. Although the Corps has not yet received the substantive information requested from the Tribes, the Corps has followed-up with the Tribes about the Corps' request for information that will inform the remand analysis. See ECF 281, 302, and 306.

The Corps also continues to evaluate available information, including the various reports and comments previously submitted by the Tribes after the Section 408 permission was granted, but before the easement was issued. The Corps anticipates that it will be able to meet the approximate April 2, 2018 remand completion date. ECF 281 at 2. The Corps' expectation regarding the time necessary for its remand analysis is based on the Corps' best estimates, including considerations of the information received to date from all requested sources.

Dated: February 1, 2017
